UNCONVENTIONAL APPROACH TO MITIGATE LITIGATION RISK

It's conventional wisdom in contracts that you should go to arbitration, but that may not actually be the wisest move. Many contracting lawyers include binding arbitration clauses, attorneys' fees clauses, etc. – thinking that those terms are best for your organization.

This session contends that the conventional wisdom is wrong on conventional terms. Instead, there are numerous unique terms that few contract attorneys use that may actually be more effective than conventional terms in mitigating litigation risk.

Learn from the panelists' real-life examples on how including unconventional terms in your contracts will minimize the risk and maximize the outcome when your company is faced with litigation.

This session will highlight some tried techniques for managing international contracts including ways to determine and address the highest risk items in international contracts, deciding when it is worthwhile to retain outside counsel and determining the appropriate scope of review by outside counsel.

Quantifying risk can take many forms and be used for different purposes. Expert panelists will discuss how they use risk-based approaches in their own contracting function, including efficiently routing new contract requests, escalating negotiation approvals and remediating risk efforts in legacy agreements. Learn how these approaches can be used to apply cost-benefit analyses to guide the allocation of resources in your legal department.
